Thousands of Georgia growers join Gov. Brian Kemp and Commissioner Gary Black in making appeal for disaster assistance from Congress

By Amy Carter
amy.carter@agr.georgia.gov

Georgia Gov. Brian Kemp joined Agriculture Commissioner Gary Black in making a direct appeal for immediate disaster aid to members of Georgia's Congressional delegation in Washington, D.C.

In a letter dated Feb. 14, Kemp and Black noted that "quality of life conditions throughout rural Georgia remain in peril as a result of Hurricane Michael." The letter was accompanied by an attachment containing signatures of support from 2,600 growers, grower organizations and state lawmakers.

Disaster aid is also a priority for an upcoming visit Black will be making to Washington.

The state has responded in an "unprecedented way" to the recovery need through tax credits, short-term financing, and direct assistance for forest debris removal, the letter said. "Yet, far too many farm families face heightened uncertainty approaching this planting season."

Former Gov. Nathan Deal called a special session of the General Assembly last fall to consider an assistance package weeks after of the storm. During that special session, the legislature appropriated $55 million in direct aid to growers that was used to endow a low-interest loan program. Requests for more than $100 million were submitted to the loan fund's administrators.

The State House and Senate Appropriations committees have both voted to add millions more to the fund through proposed amendments to the FY19 budget. The House is requesting a $10 million infusion; the Senate, $18 million.

Even more rapid than the state's response in the wake of the storm, was the initial promise of assistance from the federal government. U.S. Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue toured affected areas with Black just days after the storm. President Donald Trump and Vice President Mike Pence returned with Secretary Perdue to Georgia days later, meeting with residents of affected areas and promising a swift response.

Congressional action on funds, however, was derailed by the partial government shutdown. The body failed to act on a $3 billion appropriation requested by U.S. Senators David Perdue and Johnny Isakson earlier this month.

On Feb. 15, Senators Perdue and Isakson announced their intent to introduce a stand-alone version of that package to Congress Feb. 25.

"Enough is enough," Senator Perdue said. "Georgia and other states across the country are hurting from historic hurricanes and devastating wildfires, and the federal government continues to drag its feet. In October, President Trump and Vice President Pence both saw the devastation firsthand and promised to help Georgia and other states rebuild. It's long past time to make good on those promises."

The stand-alone package proposed by Senators Perdue and Isakson includes $3 billion to provide agriculture disaster relief for farmers recovering from Hurricane Michael, as well as funds for communities in Georgia and other states.

"We are in crisis mode for our farmers and agricultural community, and we will not stop until we get needed aid for those who have suffered devastation," Isakson said. "Additional losses grow every day we wait, and it's far past time we fulfill the promises that were made."

Hurricane Michael cut a swath of destruction from Southwest Georgia to Augusta Oct. 10-11. The storm struck as cotton, pecan, peanut and vegetable crops were nearing harvest, preventing farmers from recouping the considerable investments of time and money necessary to bring those crops to maturity.

Storm damages in Georgia exceed $2.5 billion. Nearly $1 billion of that was timber damaged or destroyed by the storm.

Wild horses find refuge with three Georgia horsewomen

An Act of Congress

"Congress finds and declares that wild free-roaming horses and burros are living symbols of the historic and pioneer spirit of the West; (and) that they contribute to the diversity of life forms within the Nation and enrich the lives of the American people..."

(Public Law 92-195, December 15, 1971)

By Amy Carter

Few things separate the women from the girls faster than the sight of 14 hands and several hundred pounds of untamed Mustang ambling over for a howdy-do. He's in no hurry, that horse, but there's little doubt about his destination as his gaze never wavers from the stranger in his midst.

He meanders through that invisible gap most civil beings maintain when engaged in polite social discourse, the better to body check his guest and reintroduce her to the pasture gate. It's an insistent push he gives but not a bullish one — no more pressure than a man might apply when putting his hand to the small of a woman's back to guide her across a room.

Sandra Williamson in the pasture with Shy Boy, Faith, Prince and Luna. (Amy Carter/GDA)

The Mustang is one of the few living links to the American Wild West of yore, so one imagines that if that horse could talk, he would sound a lot like John Wayne. His disposition skews more toward the Roy Rogers end of the cowboy congeniality scale, but when the laws of man and nature are on your side, a nudge is as effective as a shove at getting your point across.

"I admire your sand, Sister," that nudge seems to say, "but this is no place for you. Why don't you just mosey on down that same happy trail you rode in on."

Swine

If you have questions regarding ads in this category, call 404-656-3722.

Advertisers submitting swine ads must submit proof of a negative brucellosis and pseudorabies test from within the past 30 days. Exceptions are swine from a validated brucellosis-free and qualified pseudorabies-free herd; these operations must submit proof of that certification. If you are faxing or mailing in an ad, the test needs to be sent along with it. For ads submitted online, the test can be attached using the attachments button. Buyers are urged to request proof of a negative brucellosis and pseudorabies test prior to purchase.

MERCER MEDICAL MOMENT: Alzheimer's disease dilemmas

By Edward Klatt, M.D.
Professor of Pathology
Mercer University School of Medicine

As our population ages, diseases of aging are becoming more common, including Alzheimer's disease. Only during the last 100 years in human history have most people lived past 50 years of age. At age 60 less than one percent of persons are affected, but by age 85 a fourth to a third of persons have evidence for Alzheimer's disease.

Alzheimer's disease has been studied for many decades. We know the onset is subtle. Years may go by, knowing that mental ability is declining, but in denial that it is more than just "getting old and forgetful." It becomes more difficult to remember anything. It becomes more difficult to do things we take for granted, like finding our way around, getting dressed, eating and grooming.

Doctors have ways to make the diagnosis from examination of mental function. The definitive confirmation of the diagnosis is made at autopsy by looking at the brain through a microscope. Under the microscope there are large amounts of damaged tissue called plaques and tangles. It looks like the brain cells fell apart into pieces with only debris left behind.

This disease, and others like it affecting the brain, challenges our understanding of what it is to be human. Our bodies are made up from many different kinds of cells. We could lose the cells in a finger and still be ourselves. Loss of brain cells is the worst loss of all. Alzheimer's disease relentlessly destroys the cells in the brain that carry our memories, allow us to communicate, let us understand the world around us, and make us who we are. As brain cells die, personality dies, too.

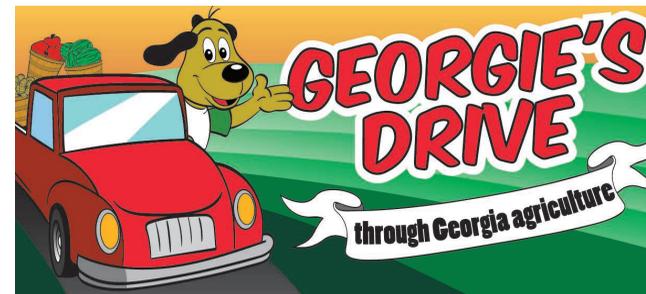

We still don't know what causes Alzheimer's disease, but we now know that there are genetic factors making Alzheimer's disease more likely to occur in some families, but still at an older age, and not in every family member. Genetic testing won't exactly predict the future. There are procedures to study the brain by imaging scans and by blood tests, but those procedures don't predict exactly what will happen next.

We are challenged to decide what to do. There are medications for Alzheimer's disease that might produce moderate benefits for a few months, but drugs cannot stop the disease progression. Alzheimer's disease affects only the brain, not other parts of the body, so persons with this disease can otherwise remain healthy for a while. Or we can treat and cure illnesses like infections or dental problems or injuries from falls. We can temporarily prolong the life of persons with Alzheimer's disease, but we cannot cure them. At some point we must decide to let go. Letting go of a loved one is difficult. When the person with Alzheimer's disease is no longer able to talk, or is no longer able to recognize anyone, or becomes agitated to the point of harming themselves or others, or is no longer able to get out of bed, then it is time to let go.

There is a price to pay for prolonged care of a person with Alzheimer's disease. The family members who provide care are put under tremendous stress. They experience anguish, become anxious, and may become depressed. The person with Alzheimer's disease does not suffer these consequences. As Alzheimer's disease progresses, care tasks take up nearly all of caregivers' free time, leaving little time for themselves or other family members. The stress leads to increases in levels of a hormone called cortisol. When cortisol stays elevated all the time from stress, it ruins the immune system and accelerates the aging process. This makes the stressed caregiver more likely to become ill. The stresses may take years off the life of a caregiver.

In summary, we can't predict who will get Alzheimer's disease, we can't prevent it, and we can't keep Alzheimer's disease from progressing. Accept that no amount of care of any kind will change the outcome for Alzheimer's disease. Accept that the person you once knew can no longer reach out to you.

What can we do? Live each day to the fullest you can, appreciate those around you as much as you can, and do as much for others as you are able to do while you can.

Georgie's Drive Thru Wintertime

Hello! I'm Georgie, the Georgia Grown mascot. I travel the state of Georgia promoting our No. 1 industry, agriculture! This time of year – with spring officially a month away – Jack Frost still visits the farm from time-to-time. Did you know he subscribes to the Market Bulletin, too? I stopped by his house above Glenwood the other day, and do you know what we talked about? The weather, of course. As you may know, cold weather is important for Georgia agriculture. Freezing temperatures kill lots of insect pests and provide the chill hours trees need to produce fruit. But an unexpected freeze in late winter or early spring can destroy an entire year's worth of fruit, especially blueberries. Lots of farmers have added overhead frost protection in the form of water sprinklers to prevent their young fruit crops from freezing and dying. Other farms use a new version of an old farming staple, the windmill. For decades, farmers used wind power to run their water wells. Nowadays, wind machines are used to move warmer air hanging above fields down to ground level, preventing freeze damage to plants. Many of these wind generators are powered by propane and rotate 360 degrees, protecting up to 15 acres each.

COOK GEORGIA GROWN: More recipes from the Governor's Mansion

On Jan. 24, First Lady Marty Kemp hosted a luncheon for legislative spouses that was planned around a menu prepared with Georgia Grown products. We shared the very popular Pecan Cobbler recipe with you last issue; here are three more tasty recipes from that luncheon.

Georgia's First Family started their residency in the Governor's Mansion with the announcement that foods and food products grown and made in Georgia will figure prominently on their menus. Find Georgia Grown products to prepare Georgia Grown meals at home by visiting www.GeorgiaGrown.com.

Grilled Chicken with Basil Vinaigrette

Ingredients:

3 boneless chicken breasts

Garnish

½ cup small diced cucumber
½ cup small diced tomatoes

Brine

2 cups water
1 clove garlic, minced
1 Tbsp. kosher salt

1 Tbsp. brown sugar
2 Tbps. basil stems

Preparation:

Combine all ingredients in a resealable bag. Add chicken breasts to brine. Refrigerate 1 hour.

Remove chicken from brine, pat with paper towels to dry. Grill over medium heat until internal temperature of 160 degrees. Let rest 5 – 10 minutes to allow carry over cooking to 165 degrees.

Slice chicken on a bias. Depending on size of breasts, serve 3-4 slices per serving. Top chicken with 1 Tbsp. each of cucumbers and tomatoes. Drizzle with basil vinaigrette. (Can be served atop green salad if desired.)

Basil Vinaigrette

Ingredients:

⅓ cup white balsamic vinegar
⅔ cup Georgia Olive Oil
Salt & Pepper
½ cup fresh basil leaves

Preparation:

In a food processor, combine vinegar and fresh basil. Puree until smooth. Gradually add olive oil with motor running to form an emulsion. Season with salt & pepper.

Collard Green Salad with Satsuma Vinaigrette

Ingredients:

16 cups shredded collard greens, stems removed
1 cup slivered onions or scallions
½ cup pecan oil, divided (can substitute canola or sunflower oil)
1 cup Satsuma juice (can substitute tangerine or clementine juice)
¼ cup cider vinegar
1 tsp. minced garlic
Salt and pepper
Sunflower seeds for garnish (optional)

Preparation:

In a large bowl, combine collard greens with ¼ cup pecan oil and kosher salt. Massage greens until they become wilted. Add onions to bowl and mix well.

In a separate bowl, combine remaining ingredients, whisking to combine. Pour Satsuma dressing over greens, mix well, then refrigerate several hours or overnight.

Serves 12-16. Recipe can be halved.

Pimento Cheese Deviled Eggs

Ingredients:

6 eggs, hard cooked, peeled
½ cup pimento cheese
2 Tbps. chopped scallions
3 Tbps. mayonnaise
3 Tbps. plain Greek yogurt
Salt and pepper

Preparation:

Cut eggs in half, remove yolks. In a small bowl, mash egg yolks to remove lumps. Add remaining ingredients to bowl and mix smooth.

Using a pastry bag with a wide tip, fill egg halves, swirling to make decorative.

A promise of spring The first bloom of the 2019 peach season greeted Georgia Grown members touring a peach orchard owned by Dickey Farms in Musella.

Hope grows in Georgia

There's no way to know if the 18th Century English poet, Alexander Pope, had just spied the first blossom of a coming peach crop when he penned the phrase, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast." But in the waning days of a dreary winter that slogged in on the heels of a torrid fall, hope for a better year for Georgia agriculture sprang forth on the bright pink petals of a mid-state peach bloom.

The blossom greeted Georgia Grown members touring a Dickey Farms peach orchard in Musella as part of the 2019 Georgia Grown Symposium held in Macon and surrounding communities Feb. 12-13. Nearly 200 members representing the agritourism and craft food industries attended the two-day symposium hosted by the marketing arm of the Georgia Department of Agriculture.

In addition to the symposium, Georgia Grown spent the first two months of the new year promoting locally grown food and value-added food products and commodities at some 25 events held throughout the state. Some – like the symposium and associated farm tours and the upcoming observance of Georgia Ag Week March 18-22 – are planned and executed by Georgia Grown staff.

Others are external events that offer exposure to new markets and populations of consumers. The momentum will continue throughout the year with the goal of broadening knowledge of and interest in locally grown and manufactured agricultural products from Georgia.

Georgia Grown Symposium and Farm Tour — Macon, Fort Valley, Musella, The Rock

Speaking of Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Gary Black delivered the keynote address that opened the Georgia Grown Symposium in Macon Feb. 12.

Peach market Cynde Dickey of Dickey Farms talked history in a converted packing shed in Musella.

Planning Special events sponsored by Georgia Grown, including the 2019 Symposium and Georgia Ag Week, start with marketing specialist Kelli Williams, shown here with administrative assistant Julie Reinhardt in the GDA's Atlanta office.

Pruning peach trees While Georgia Grown was visiting Dickey Farms, a field worker was busy pruning the peach trees in anticipation of a new crop.

One farmer to another Georgia Grown Commission members Duke Lane of Lane Southern Orchards and Sheila Rice of Calhoun Produce during a tour of Lane Southern Orchards in Fort Valley.

Ag tech Tour participants took a keen interest in an automated cart that delivers bins of tomatoes and cucumbers from the greenhouse to the packing house at Pure Flavor.

Whiskey, Wine and Wildlife — Jekyll Island

Converting the multitudes Whiskey, Wine and Wildlife – an annual fundraiser for the Jekyll Island Foundation – offers Georgia Grown members an audience with affluent coastal consumers.

Pure Flavor The first stop on the Georgia Grown Farm Tour itinerary was to Pure Flavor's greenhouse complex in Peach County. The company grows tomatoes on the vine and long English cucumbers for distribution throughout the Southeast. (Pure Flavor photos courtesy Pure Flavor (c) 2019)

Pickled everything Crowds were drawn to the tent occupied by Phickles out of Athens. They sold out of pickled Brussels Sprouts, the newest addition to the company's small-batch artisan food line.

Talking shop Peter Vossenberg, executive chef at Edgar's Grille in Augusta, talks with Georgia Grown Area Marketing Representative Lee Lancaster during a break at the Georgia Grown Symposium.

High cotton Amy and Michael Brooks introduced the symposium crowd to Southern Drawl Cotton, a new Georgia Grown member based in Omega.

A fun job Georgia Grown marketing coordinators Tom Neville, Happy Wyatt and Beth Meeks after setting up for Whiskey, Wine and Wildlife Feb. 9.

Taco time Georgia Grown Executive Chef Holly Chute prepared and shared Cornbread Jalapeno Crusted Chicken Tacos with the crowd.

Feed, Hay and Grain Wanted

AG SEED FOR SALE

If you have questions regarding this category, call 404-656-3722.

Advertisers must submit a current state laboratory report, fewer than nine months old, for purity, noxious weeds and germination for each seed lot advertised. Ads submitted without this information will not be published. If you are faxing or mailing in an ad, this report needs to be sent along with it. For ads submitted online, the report can be attached using the attachments button. Seed lots must be uniform and cannot exceed 400 50-pound bags. Certain varieties of seed are protected from propagation unless they are grown as a class of certified seed. These include Florida 304, Coker 9152, Coker 9835, 6738 soybean, Haskell, Bennings and others. For questions regarding certified seed, call the Department's Seed Division at 404-656-3635.

WILD HORSES: BLM adoption events help with herd management

The most important thing to know about Mustangs is that they do not suffer fools – lightly or otherwise.

“You have a horse that knows how to survive on its own. It wasn’t born into a world where it was reliant on humans for anything,” says Elizabeth Montgomery, executive director of the Alpharetta-based Mustang and Wild Horse Rescue of Georgia. “When you start working with them, you have to build trust and a relationship with them. You have to get them to where they want to be with you, desire to be with you. You can’t force them to be with you.”

Wild and free

Another important thing to know about mustangs: by authority of a wistful – indeed romantic – act of Congress, Mustangs and wild burros are protected “from capture, branding, harassment, or death; and to accomplish this they are to be considered in the area where presently found, as an integral part of the natural system of the public lands.”

The 1971 Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act calls these animals “living symbols of the historic and pioneer spirit of the West,” and charges the U.S. Department of the Interior Bureau of Land Management with monitoring and managing said animals in situ on 26.9 million acres of public range land across 10 western states.

In March 2018, the BLM estimated the population of wild horses and burros on protected lands at 81,951 – nearly four times the bureau’s target healthy population. When freedom becomes too great a strain for the herd or the land to bear, the agency is authorized to gather excess animals and offer them for sale or adoption.

Adoption fees start at $125. Adoption events are conducted east and west of the Mississippi, but adoptions have not kept up with herd growth. According to the BLM, unchecked herds double in size every four years.

Elizabeth is one of three Georgia women actively engaged in rescuing, rehabilitating and training Mustang horses adopted from the BLM. Each woman takes a unique approach to the horses. Elizabeth and her volunteers take in Mustangs from adoptive owners who cannot or do not properly care for the horses. Their mission is one of rehabilitating and rehoming the horses to loving owners.

Finding sanctuary

Karin Vonk and her husband, Erik, have devoted 80 acres of their 2,000-acre farm in Webster County to serve as a sanctuary for Mustangs adopted directly from the BLM or rescued from negligent adopters.

“Mustangs are wild horses. They’re supposed to take care of themselves. I don’t need to be there every day to train them, to groom them,” she says. “I am not planning to train the horses, not planning to ride the horses. They can just live their lives out free.”

Karin is tall and slim with a regal European bearing. Everything about her – speech, movement, emotion – is a study in restrained elegance. But she gets giddy at the sight of her Mustangs. As she navigates her farm truck around the perimeter of the pasture fence, searching for the herd, her breathless chatter about the horses is punctuated with giggles and greetings for a farm dog named Franky who is pacing the truck.

“They all have names,” she says of the horses. “I chose them because they are basically unadoptable because of color – bay, brown are not very popular. So many people want to go for flashy paints. I have sorrels. Small horses are not popular. I took the horses that would not have a chance to be adopted.”

She punctuates that thought with a shout-out to the dog that decided of his own accord to make her farm his home. “Hey Franky!” she hollers, leaning out the window.

Karin rode Dutch Warmbloods as a girl in Holland “until something really disastrous happened.” When she was about 17 years old, her family’s barn burned down. Her horse died in the fire.

“I never rode or wanted to attach to any living being anymore after that,” she says. “But of course, as I got older, it continued to itch.”

Elizabeth Montgomery sweet-talks Triton, a 9-year-old gelding born in BLM holding.

With both of their families still in Europe, Erik and Karin could not be tied-down by animals requiring constant care and attention. Karin is resolute that she will never ride again, despite an ongoing love for horses manifested by that itch. A BLM adoption event in Unadilla in 2016 offered the best of both worlds: Karin could have her horses without being a slave to them. Or so she says.

When she finally spies the herd on the far side of the pasture, she leaps out of the truck and scales the six-foot pasture fence in a single graceful bound. She lands in tall grass and is soon surrounded by a half-dozen horses, all vying for her affection.

She spends just enough time with them daily to get them used to human interaction, so that visits from the veterinarian and the farrier cause little stress. She’s planning to add 30 acres and a pond to their pasture so they may be even more self-reliant, just like they were in the wild.

A matter of trust

Yet another interesting fact about Mustangs: They do not bow down easily. One must work hard to earn their trust and affection.

“It’s very dangerous,” says Sandra Williamson, a German-born horsewoman who founded Rackettown Mustangs outside of Lyons. “These horses are so smart. They look through you. They know exactly what you think.”

With help from her husband, Stone, Sandra built a series of corrals and fenced pastures where dozens of Mustangs and burros in various stages of training roam at will. It is there that Sandra trains the horses for export to European buyers.

“European people just love them,” she says. “They go from English riding to western riding to trail riding. They use them for jumping, for dressage and therapy. One of these Mustangs became a therapy horse for a 7-year-old girl who was born without any feeling in her legs. She’s in a wheelchair but the bond this girl and this Mustang have, it’s just amazing.”

Sandra’s is the biggest training challenge, for the horses must be crated in jet boxes and loaded on cargo planes for Transatlantic flight to their new owners. Recently, Sandra and friend Ann Vander Horn flew Lufthansa nine hours to Frankfurt, Germany, with six horses destined for new homes there.

The horses Sandra receives from the BLM have never been touched by human hands. All are fed, watered and spoken to daily. They are slowly acclimated to human touch, trained to pick up their feet when asked by the farrier. They receive medical care. But some still huff and puff when Sandra walks by, running to the other side of the corral and eyeing her warily as she passes.

“I’ve had to jump on the fence line to keep from getting run over, not because they want to hurt you, because they want to get away from you. You’re a predator at that point. That’s why we’re here, to show them humans are not that bad,” she says.

The opportunity to see a wild horse finally understand that message is one that all three women get often – and cherish.

“I think that’s when you see people like us and Karin and Sandra get so passionate about the horses,” Elizabeth says. “A lot of it comes from when you see firsthand this horse who was once roaming free and has the choice to not be with you actually choose to be with you and want to do something that you ask them. Even if it’s something they’re not comfortable with doing, like getting on a trailer or going past a scary blue tarp on the ground. The fact that they trust you enough to set aside their instinct that says, ‘Don’t go anywhere near that. Go in the other direction,’ and say, ‘I’m okay with that. If you tell me it’s okay, I’m okay with that.’”

“I think that’s where people get so hooked on the Mustangs. It’s amazing, truly amazing, to see that transformation in them.”
